Ⅳ 次の英文を読んで、以下の問いに答えなさい。

One of the most important festivals in *Oman is the Muscat Festival. The festival lasts for about one month and takes place in February every year. During the festival, many activities are available for people to take part in.

Large numbers of people, including local Omanis and visitors to Oman, go to the different events. The events are a celebration of both Omani and international history and traditions. The events take place in different places across the country. Many businesses show their products for people to look at and buy.

The Muscat Festival also includes the very popular six-day Tour of Oman bike race. Professional cyclists from around the world take part in the race. The race is 620 miles (1,000 kilometers) long, and it takes the cyclists up the beautiful Jabal Al Akhdhar — the Green Mountain.

Other highlights of the Muscat Festival include the chance to try out different types of food at the Oman Food Festival. The Muscat Art Festival also offers Arabic music, concerts and plays, and other entertainment for the whole family. The Festival of Lights is one of the most popular events at the Muscat Festival.

The Muscat Festival is an international event, with people visiting from countries as far away as Brazil and Cuba. Visitors also arrive from Italy, India, Russia, South Korea, Spain, Tunisia, and Turkey, as well as many other countries. They enjoy the amazing clothes, food, and music. Some people just enjoy the mix of different cultures.

(注) Oman オマーン (アラビア半島に位置する国)

Ⅴ 次の英文を読んで、以下の問いに答えなさい。

One fine morning in early winter, a *woodman went from his little house into the forest just outside his door. 【ア cutting down イ he ウ his エ most オ of カ spent キ time ク trees】. He stopped in front of one tall tree and prepared to cut it down.

He was marking and measuring the tree and looking at the branches. Suddenly, the tree began to shake gently and a soft voice spoke to him sadly from the branches.

“Oh, woodman!” said the voice. “Please be kind (あ) me! I have ①make my winter home in this tree. If you cut it down I *shall have nowhere to sleep and must die in the cold.”

The woodman was almost too surprised to speak.

“Who are you?” he said. “I can’t see you!”

“No, because I am a *woodland fairy. You can see only the tree that *clothes me and the branches where, in the spring, I will grow my pretty green hair. If you will not hurt me, then I will give you and your wife three wishes.”

The woodman agreed to leave the tree standing, so that the fairy could sleep within it until the spring.

He then hurried home to tell his wife what happened. Then he sat in his chair and asked (い) his food.

“There is only bread!” said the lady. “But with three wishes we can —”

“Only bread!” said the woodman. “I wish a hundred dishes of good hot *black puddings would come through that window —”

He stopped ②talk suddenly. His wife gave a little cry and dropped the bread. Through the window came the biggest, hottest and ③good hundred dishes of black puddings you ever saw in your life! The woodman’s mouth *watered as he looked at them.

“④Pick up a dish, wife!” he cried. “Here’s food for a hungry man!”

“Pick up a dish yourself!” cried his wife angrily. “One of our three wishes is gone, and we have only a hundred black puddings to show for it! I wish they were hanging on the end of your foolish nose!”

“Ugh! Ugh! Ugh!” shouted the woodman, jumping halfway across the kitchen. “What’s this? What’s this?”

He was wildly shaking his head. For the whole line of black puddings had suddenly become stuck on his nose, as his wife had wished.

The woodman was angry and afraid as he tried unsuccessfully to shake the black puddings from his nose. His wife was also very afraid. She tried to cut them away — but they were fairy black puddings and it was not possible to remove them. (う) fact, *it would have been easier to cut off her husband's head. She began to cry. The more she cried, the more bad language the woodman used. However, the very hot black puddings stayed hanging from the *tip of his nose.

“Don't worry! Don't worry!” said his wife, as pleasantly as she could. “We'll have a big house with people to serve us, and we'll have lots of animals too. We only have to decide how much money to wish for. Then we can live happily for the rest of our lives.”

“Live happily!” shouted her husband. “Who's going to live happily with one hundred hot, smelly, black puddings hanging from his nose!? I *wish to goodness they were back out the window, where they came from.”

All of a sudden, he felt a sort of electricity in his nose. A second later the hundred black puddings flew out the window and disappeared. The woodman and his wife stood looking at each other. (え) last the old husband spoke, touching his nose at the same time.

“*What's the good of wishing for things?” he said thoughtfully. “You never know where you are when you have them. Prepare some fresh bread, wife, and we'll eat.”

And that was the end of the three wishes given to the woodman and his wife by the fairy who lived in the tree.
